Her Trip from America to India SITAPUR, INDIA, March 10, 1878.

At the conclusion of our rough passage scross the Atlantic, we appreciated terra firms as never before. Our first day in (liasgow, Wednesday, October 31st, we were content to spend in absolute rest. The day following, through the kindness of a Scotch friend, we drove through the city, and visited places of interest. Of course we went to the famous old Cathedral, which bears the name of its founder, St. Mungo. St. Mungo died in the year 601, hence the original edifice must have been built before that date. It is said that in the lapse of time this building been built before that date. It is said that in the lapse of time this building utterly disappeared, but its place was marked by a cross, and in the reign of Alexander I. this site was chosen for the "Cathedral of the West." It was commenced during the reign of David I., and consecrated July 7th, 1135. A fire destroyed it in 1192, but it was immediately rebuilt. The architecture is Gothic. As we entered the years weaters door the grand hand. From the Necropolis we order the City Industrial Museum, and from there to the University. This latter was founded by Wm. Turnbull, Bishop of Glasgow in 1450. The present structure is of recentdate, and is not yet completed. It has already cost £255,000, and it will require the sum of £120,000 more to finish it. Last year there were 1800 students and 32 professors. We saw the famous black stone examination chair, in which every pupil that ever entered up to the year 1860 was examined. It is of ebony richly carved, and has a black stone seat from which it derives its name Crowning the summit of the high back is an hour glass enclosed by laurel long one and brimful of passengers. We rushed out on the platform, into the rain and confusion, on the hunt of an empty "compartment," but none could be found. Up the platform and down we went, with our necks stretched, and heads turned gaping into every car, and bumping against every individual who was unfortunate enough to come in our be he Top Mill.

The Tariff.

The New York Bulletin of yesterday [Mooday] gives a classification of the way he Lover House of Congress stands on Wood's tariff bill. All three of our West Virgios members are put down in favor of Wood's bill. The whole House foots who when suddenly one will be will be when the whole who will be will be when the whole who will be wil find a compartment. The poor man only uttered the single monosyllable "Nine?" and started off with us at his heels to and started off with us at his heels to order another carriage. It came, was coupled on, and when the last man, woman, and boy was stored away in it, he left us with a look of relief, and we congratulated ourselves that the train was not permitted to leave without us. At 10 F. M. we were in Edinburgh. The next morning we went out sight-seeing. In the gardens near our hotel we saw the Sir Walter Scott monument, a Gothic tower 200 feet high, covering with tarch a colossal statue of Sir Walter. The weather was beautiful, and we concluded to walk to the castle. This is built on a huge rock, accessible only on one side. Burns said of it:

"There, watchlor high the less talarus,

"There, watchine high the least alarms,
Tny rough, ruis fortress glerms afar;
Like some bold veierus, gay in arms,
And marked with many a seamy con;
Thy pond rous wall and masey bar,
Urim-rising o'es the rugged roce,
Have oft with the dasatiling war,
And oft repell'd the inveder's shock."

And of repell'd the tureder's shock."

We were interested in examining different parts of this old fortrees. The crown room in which is the Scottish Begalia was especially attractive. The Regalia proper consists of the crown, scepter, and sword of State, but with these are additional jewels. These have a strange history, which have been written up by Sir Walter Scett. As we did at Stirling, so did we here look over the battlementa. The view of the city is very fine from the highest part of the wall. We left the Castle to visit Holyrood. On our way whom should we meet but Dr. Surrounded as both parties were contained as both parties were being and intelligence, and in admired—the bride for her amiability and intelligence, and in the presence of the bride for her amiability and intelligence, and in the presence of it himself. The Doctor of an admired—the bride for her amiability and intelligence, and in the presence of it himself. The Doctor of and scholarly accomplishments, and that they were peculiarly do each other; and Dame Forer ordained a happier union is twain. We but a scholar and the presence of the aments, Holyrood. We saw John Knox's house, ulliarly above the door of which is the quaint inserting of the same state of the same state of the same state of the same state of the same very poor and inhabited by wretched ant can looking people, and saw the Moray Weston The White Horse Close, the principal resort of the pretender's officers in 1745, claimed a moment's notice. A few paces further on is Holyrood. We first visited the old Abbey, now a magnificent ruin. In this place Charles I was crowned King of Scotland, and Mary Queen of Scotts was married to Lord Darnley. Then we went into the place and visited Lord Darnley's apartments, and thence on to Queen Mary's. We tarried long in these rooms, where the unfortunate and lovely Mary Queen of Scotts spent many many hours. We saw her dressing room, and the little room where Ricero was murdered at her feet. After looking at the portraits of all the Scottish soverigns (') in the Picture Gailery, we turned toward our hotel. Dr. and I still felt equal to a climb up Calton Hill, hence we left our friends, who were much fatigued, and went above to see the Nelson monument, and observatory. In the evening after a set derive the afternoon Dr. and led for A WHEELING LADY ABROAD, sort of the pretender's officers in 1745, ning were off to London, of which Representative Phillips' bill, introduced to-day, sets aside the recent sales of 4½ per cent bonds to the Syndicate and declares that sales made with an association to the exclusion of all other citizens be contrary to public policy. It also declares against sales for coin certificates instead of the coin. The purpose of the bill is to bring the matter regularly before the Banking Committee so as to report it back in order to set aside the sale, and leave the sale of bonds for coin alone, so that the bonds can be sold to others without the consent of the syndicate. Water will be provided for thirty and coal for twenty-six days at the Bombay dock yard. The work is being prosecuted day and night in fitting ships for troops and horses. As an experiment of State policy, the dispatch of native troops to Europe has proved successful beyond all hopes of the most ardent advocates of the measure. The native soldiers appear completely the most ardent advocates of the measure. The native soldiers appear completely captivated by the prospect of being engaged in the military service in Europe, they are volunteering to cross the seas with enthusiasm which has surprised even those who know them best, they are pressing forward in whole regiments at a time. Troops who volunteered from Burmsh, only six days ago, and who were three years in that country are said to be delighted by the thought that they are going to some place near England to fight the Russians. In one regiment every man has signed a petition that he may be sent with the expedition to Europe.

AN UNHEALTHY LOOK FOR ENGLAND.
LONDON, April 29.—Rumor comes from Vienns that Count von Molike, the well known German strategiat, who is visiting Copenhagen, is commissioned to negotiate a league between Demmark, Russis and Germany for closing the Baltic. This rumor is probably based on a statement in the North German Gazette, of the 23d, that it would not conceal the opinion that the despatch of the British fleet to the Baltic, where many a neutral interest may be affected, would render the situation immeasurably more complicated. Vienna newspapers report that the entry of Austrian troops into Bosnia and Herzsgovinia is imminent. This announcement, however, is believed to be founded on mere conjecture, as nothing definite has been settled.

A Vienna political correspondent has a letter from London stating that the British Government still considers it possible that Russia may appreciate to the full extent England's earnestness. In the contrary case England will take into her own hands at her own risk the rectification of Russia's work in the Balkans, the Peninsula and on the Asiatic coast of the Black Sea. It is possible that before embarking in this course England will summon a conference in London.
